Law 1 - Accept That HYIP's Are Ponzi's

Fact - Almost All HYIP's Are Ponzis

Fact - You can still make money off of Ponzi Scams

When you accept that most (make it all) HYIPs are Ponzis you are on your way to becoming a great investor. Even programs that pay 1-3% a day are Ponzis. You may think that's a "reliable" return on investment, but in reality, it's impossible. Hardly any trader can make a return of 3% on a consistent basis, and if they can, tell them to contact me, I'll pay them a lot for their secrets! HYIPs with low Return On Investment (long term HYIPs) are often safer to invest in, but it still doesn't diminish the fact that they are Ponzis. Just think about it, banks generally offer a 3% annual return on investment, how do you suppose a person offer 3% a day?

Long Term HYIPs typically last 3-12 months. Some have records of lasting much longer, and some much less. Mid term HYIPs last 2-6 months on average. A 200% a day HYIP can last anywhere between 1 day to a few weeks. The sooner you accept the fact that HYIPs are Ponzi scams, the sooner you will be able to get rid of human emotions such as greed, impatience, and other emotions that hold investors (you) back. Do not take any special pride or interest in any one HYIP. Think of it as a game, you win some, you lose some, however if you are smart about it, you will naturally get better at the game and “win” more. Please do not believe in “cheerleaders”. They often hype up HYIPs, and cause you to invest more than needed. Cheerleaders are those forum posters that defend and support the HYIP in any way imaginable, even if they are wrong. This is why I sometimes think reading forum posts on HYIPs are counter-productive, because once you start letting the opinions of others get into your investment strategy, you may start to prefer one HYIP over another, and any real investor knows not to gain any emotional attachment to any one particular HYIP and treat all HYIPs equal, even if your mother runs it!
